Two Fall Out of Canoe But Get Safely To Shore

Two young men, lured by the bright sunshine and summer-like temperature, got into a canoe early this morning and started paddling on the Delaware river along the Bristol waterfront.

The river was quiet and smooth. There was not a ripple on the surface. The sun was brilliant and high in the sky, and conditions ideal for a canoe ride on the historic stream.

Then suddenly something happened—just what appears to be a mystery. The canoe turned over and into the water went Richard Doyle, 232 Dorance street, and John Vandenburg, 529 Radcliffe street. It was about 6.30 and the temperature of the water was considerably lower than that of the atmosphere.

It was but a minute before the young men were chilled to the bone. They had started their ride from the Walnut street dock. They swam and hung onto the canoe as far as the Manhattan Soap Co. There employees of the Manhattan Co., saw their predicament and threw them a rope.

In the meantime the police were called and the Rescue Squad of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department responded. Chief Samuel Hagerman and one fire apparatus also answered the call. The police radio car went to the scene.

The two imperiled had been brought ashore and made a quick run for the boiler room of the Manhattan Soap Co., where they stood close to the heat, shook the water from their shoes and wrung out their clothing.

The ambulance of the Bucks County Rescue Squad responded.

Doyle and Vandenburg refused to go to a hospital when requested by Officer Stackhouse and appeared to be none the worse for their early morning dip.

An important meeting of Harbor borough council members, realtors, builders and executives of the Brewster company, together with representatives of the Federal Housing bureau, was held yesterday for the purpose of getting started immediately on a proposition to erect 700 new homes that will house the defense workers who will be employed at the plant.

75,000 MEN OF U. S. ARMY ARE READY FOR ACTION

Survey Reveals That at Least Five Full Divisions Are Ready

COULD GO INTO ACTION

(Note: The army as an organization is now ready to strike if necessary, reports Griffing Bancroft, INS Staff reporter at Washington, who has just completed a 6,000-mile tour of army posts and other defense installations throughout the country. In the following series of articles, of which this is the first, he describes just what has been done—and what remains to be done—in defense preparations.)

By Griffing Bancroft

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent) WASHINGTON, Apr. 19—(INS)—America's new army is no longer a fighting machine purely in men's minds. Today it has powerful elements that are ready to strike.

Commanders of some of its hardest-hitting units—divisions which a few months ago were just handfuls of trained cadres with obsolete equipment—report now "we are ready to go into action at once if it is necessary."

A two-week 6,000-mile air tour of 15 principal army posts and other defense installations from coast to coast has disclosed that at least five full divisions, averaging about 15,000 men each, could be thrown into the field tomorrow if the call came.

While this may not be much when weighed against the millions in arms in Europe, and while equipment could be more modern and more plentiful, it represents a striking force far superior to that which this country had when it entered the last war. Leaders are confident this nucleus could maintain itself against almost any enemy until the projected thirty additional divisions are ready.

Military equipment for this new army is no longer just "on order." It has begun to roll in earnest from the nation's assembly lines.

The emphasis is not now on research and "educational orders"—existing

Hold Janitor in Girl's Death

Akron, O., Apr. 19—A 58-year-old janitor of the North Hill Methodist Church today was held in connection with the death of pretty Ruth Zwicker, 24, Akron music teacher, whose charred bones were found in the furnace in the church basement.

Germans Claim Swastika Is On Mount Olympus

Berlin, Apr. 19—German divisions sweeping rapidly southward in a series of violent battles today planted the swastika on the snow-capped peak of Mount Olympus and captured the key transportation center of Larissa, 30 miles south of the mythological home of the gods, the Nazi GHQ announced.

With German legions rushing through mountain passes on either side of Mt. Olympus, according to the Supreme Command, and with the Anglo-Greek armies reported in "full retreat," Greek capitulation and an armistice within a few days were predicted.

An air of expectancy in Wilhelmstrasse even foreshadowed such rapid developments that a major announcement on Chancellor Hitler's 52nd birthday tomorrow, it was said, "would not be surprising."

Pushing onward, the Germans drove to within 150 miles of Athens and, it was believed, took the town of Pharsala and the port of Volos, 30 miles southeast of Larissa.

German quarters forecast Greek surrender before the capital is reached unless the British concentrate more troops at Athens.

Hitler himself has gone to the front to spend his birthday, as usual with his troops and personally to direct the final blows against the British and Greeks.

Larissa is on the arterial rail line reaching southward to Athens. From Larissa a line runs to Volos, believed to be the main embarkation port of the BEF.

Southwest of Larissa another branch line extends northwest to Trikala and Kalabaka, for which a major battle now is in progress. The fall of Larissa gives the German mechanized divisions a clear sweep of flat terrain, since the Olympian Mountains now have been left far behind.

Firemen From 5 Companies Battle Butcher Shop Fire

NESHAMINY, Apr. 19—Firemen battled a fire for three hours at the butcher house of William Gross, was razed along Folly Road, on Thursday.

Five companies answered the general alarm and hundreds of people were attracted to the fire. The estimated loss is $4,000.

The fire, which destroyed the large butcher house, was discovered by Mrs. William Gross, who awakened others in her family and neighbors. Neighbors had already removed some equipment from the butcher house.

Large quantities of equipment and meat products were carried from the building while firemen kept flames fairly well under control. Sausage grinders, meat cutters, tables, racks and quantities of meat and pork products were salvaged. A late model market truck was pushed out of the building before being damaged.

Fire reached the refrigerating equipment and the electric company was called to disconnect wires which carried current and threatened to cause damage to the Gross residence nearby.

Fritz Gross, son of the owner of the place, reported that the damage caused by the well caged for farm are covered by insurance except the one burned to the walls.

Cause of the fire is undetermined. There was a stove in the butcher house which had been used earlier in the evening. The fire seemed to center around the stove, firemen declared.

Breslin-Cocci Wedding Is Morning Event of Interest

A nuptial ceremony was solemnized with high mass in St. Ann's Church here this morning at 10 o'clock. The contracting parties were Miss Anna J. Cocci, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cocci, 351 Lincoln avenue, and Mr. Thomas J. Breslin, son of Mrs. John Breslin, 625 Race street. The Rev. Peter Pinci was the officiating member of the priesthood.

Miss Frances Tambella presided at the organ console for the wedding marches, and also accompanied Miss Isabel Heath, Buckley street, as she sang "Ave Maria," and Mr. Louis Runtano, Bath street, whose vocal selection was "The Rosary."

Three young women attended the former Miss Cocci as bridesmaids, they being inclusive of: Miss Helen Breslin, sister of the groom; Miss Helen Rogers, Spruce street; and Miss Helen Weber. Attending Mr. Breslin as groomsmen was Mr. John Duffy, of Buckley street; and the ushers were Messrs. John Breslin, brother of the groom, and Howard Snyder.

The bride wore white, and her trio of attendants were attired in white and red.

The bride's attractive gown was of white net over satin. The neck-line was sweet-heart style, and sleeves were short. The full skirt was paneled, with each panel being finished in ruching of self-material, as was also the edge of the long train. A tulle veil fell from a tiara of pearls and rhinestones. Her slippers were of white satin. As the bride entered the edifice she carried a white prayer book to which was attached a shower of orchids and gardenias. For the recessional she carried a bouquet of orchids, gardenias, and valley lilies.

The bridesmaids wore gowns of white marquisette with trim of lace, over satin. The costumes were fitted at the waist-line, the sleeves short, neck-lines square, and the full skirts were floor length. White face veils were attached to head-dresses formed of artificial red roses; and doekins slippers were in red. Each maid carried a colonial bouquet of red roses.

Dinner will be served at the home of the bride's parents during the early afternoon.

For the three-day journey to New York City, Mrs. Breslin will wear a black coat suit, red felt hat and red accessories, and a corsage of orchids. The newlyweds will reside at 341 Madison street.

PUPILS ARE SHOWN PICTURES OF THEIR FEATHERED FRIENDS

Mrs. Everette Griscom, Roslyn, Tells of Birds, "The Original Travelers"

CLUBWOMEN SPONSOR

Tells Students How Birds Aid Humans by Destroying Insect Pests

"The Original Travelers," birds in all their brilliant colorings, were shown in pictures, and their interesting habits presented in a talk by Mrs. Everette Griscom, of Roslyn, yesterday afternoon, in the Bristol high school auditorium.

The audience on this occasion was composed of pupils in grades one to six, and also the eighth grade, of the Harman Building, and the program was made possible through courtesy of the Travel Club. From the moment that Mrs. William DuHamel, club president, opened the program, with Miss Anna Heritage introducing Mrs. Griscom, the girls and boys, from the tots to those of more advanced years, were all attention. They on frequent occasion named one of their feathered friends as his or her picture was thrown on the screen. And on occasion, should they call the incorrect name, Mrs. Griscom told how they could in the future always identify a certain kind of bird.

So interesting as the talk on bird-life, as seen by the speaker from the windows of her home and open porch at the Griscom "Briarhush Bird Sanctuary" at Roslyn, that the three-quarter hour period passed all too quickly. The club member in charge of arrangements for the event was Mrs. Walter Pitkonka.

"If you should ever come with your teachers to our bird sanctuary, you would enter our home by the kitchen door," informed Mrs. Griscom. "For the front part of the house is not entered by any person. The birds make their homes just outside our porch in the wood-lot, and as you made your way softly to a place by a window, you would 'freeze,' not moving a bit. Then you could watch the birds at work, and at their food. There you would see the mother and father birds feeding nice, soft, juicy cream-puff caterpillars to the baby birds. And that is what caterpillars taste like to birds—just like cream-puffs do to us."

SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1941

MARTIAL ANNIVERSARY

On April 19, 1775, just 166 years ago, the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard 'round the world. That happened at Concord, of course. At least, Emerson wrote the familiar lines in his hymn for the Concord monument dedication.

As a matter of fact, the first shot of the Revolutionary War was fired a little earlier in the same day at Lexington, where Major Pitcairn's redcoats drove back a little band of Minute Men who later joined the main force of their comrades at Concord. There the colonists repulsed the British troops and drove them back to Charlestown.

That is why April 19 is Patriots' Day in Massachusetts, and quite as big a day on the calendar as any other legal holiday. It is an odd coincidence that April 19 is the date on which "first shots" were fired in America's other two great wars. On April 19, 1861, exactly 86 years after the battle of Concord, the first bloodshed of the Civil War took place in the streets of Baltimore when a crowd of Confederate sympathizers clashed with Federal troops. The first shot of the Civil War had been fired at Fort Sumter a week earlier, but no one was hurt at Sumter.

On April 19, 1917, the first American shot of the World War was fired by the gun crew of a United States merchant ship at a German submarine. One year after that "first shot," American troops in France fought their first important battle with the Germans. That was at Seicheprey on April 19, 1918.

So April 19 is a date marked in red in the history of America's three principal wars. In two of the nation's smaller wars that date was narrowly missed. The first shot of the Spanish war was fired on April 22, 1898, four days after declaration of war, and the first battle of the Mexican war was fought on April 25, 1846.

For some reason the War of 1812 didn't get started until the summer of the year specified. But April has been the starting point of all of Uncle Sam's other major wars, and April 19 is probably the outstanding date among all of April's martial anniversaries.

Well, the nation has arrived at April 19, 1941, without getting into the current war. So perhaps Americans may put themselves on the back for having beaten down superstition.

SHOES

Back there in the old days, there used to be a woman in nearly every little town who "broke in" a new pair of shoes. One of her neighbors would go to the country seat and lay a pair, conscious that they pinched to some extent, but lulled by the explanation of the salesman that "these shoes will be perfectly comfortable when you get them broken in."

"The purchaser came home, tried on the shoes and hobbled around the house in them, finally admitting that they were too stiff and too tight. So she took them over to her neighbor, who wore them until they were stretched. That was the period when women always bought their shoes too small and were loath to tell their size if they wore anything larger than a four.

Modern women walk into a shoe shop, buy a pair of eights or nines, and wear them out. The days of "breaking in" seem to be gone forever.

"The birds are our friends. If the birds didn't eat insect pests you wouldn't have milk to drink, or lemon meringue pie to eat, or lots of other things. They destroy the pests that harm our fruit trees, and our vegetables and crops."

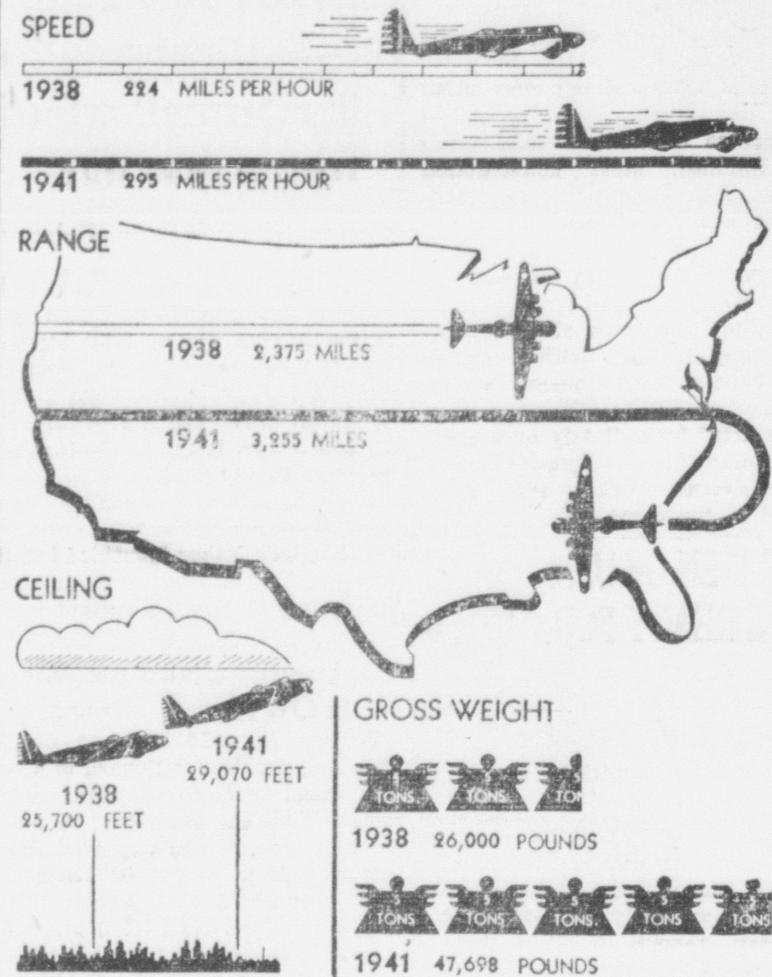

When the picture of a chick-a-dee was flashed on the screen the speaker called attention to the "magnifying glass eyes," which see microscopic clusters of eggs as they work down the trunks of trees. "The birds eat twice their weight in food each day. You couldn't do that."

That cats are one of the worst enemies of birds was one thing that Mrs. Griscom impressed on the children. "Not one of us has the right to have a cat that would harm the birds," she advised. She reminded that cats are usually well cared for, with shelter and plenty of milk and other food; while birds have always had to forage for themselves. "A cat is to a bird what a tiger is to a human being," she informed.

BIGGER, FASTER BOMBERS

ROLL FROM U. S. PLANTS

Since 1938 the average maximum speed of American-built bombing airplanes (all types) has increased 71 miles per hour. Average maximum size has almost doubled. Average maximum range has been increased nearly 900 miles. Average service ceiling is 3,300 feet higher.

Source: AVIATION NEWS COMMITTEE
Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America

Typifying the tremendous advances made by the American aircraft industry in recent years, this pictogram, prepared by the Aviation News Committee of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, shows the average increase in speed, size, range and flying height of bombers now being produced for the United States and Great Britain, as compared with those in production in 1938.

pecker pecked on a tree trunk, she pointed out how he "carries his camp stool with him, so he can sit down and meditate."

"One of God's spraying machines" was the manner in which Mrs. Griscom referred to the wood-peckers, as she told how they bore into trees for harmful grubs, placing the long tongue in the hole to pull out their food.

That flickers and some other birds eat from 3,000 to 5,000 ants at a meal was another thing the youngsters learned. "The flicker's tongue extends 2½ inches beyond his bill, and with it he bores into the ant-hills for food." The speaker then told how the starlings usurp the flickers' homes, adding that they should be kept in check as they chase other birds.

How the black-billed cuckoo destroys the harmful tent caterpillars, was another part of her message. The children were shown the tents of the caterpillars; pictures of song sparrows, cardinals, juncos, phoebes, robins, and countless other feathered creatures. As the picture of a nest with baby birds was flashed on the screen, Mrs. Griscom said: "I have found that it doesn't make any difference what size a home is. If there is father, and mother, love and care there, it is home."

types of planes, tanks, guns and other lethal instruments have been "frozen" and either are in big scale production or will be shortly. The program has ceased to be one of theory. In factories and in camps, men are getting ready in serious earnestness for whatever may transpire.

In a way, the job in the factories is bigger than the job in the camps. Military leaders are crying continually for more and more equipment, and as they get it are training their officers and men in its use. But producers are faced with the task of equipping both this army and the British.

On a dozen airports throughout the country one sees fighting planes enroute to England—planes with the circular emblem of the Royal Air Force already painted on their sides. Modern tanks, guns and munitions are going abroad in quantities. But deliveries at United States Army posts are increasing at the same time and if the need arises the flow of material across the sea can be turned to home.

The army today has two fast, hard-striking armored divisions, one of which is almost completely equipped and the other better than two-thirds equipped. It has a cavalry division which asks only "show us the enemy," and at least two infantry divisions with virtually full equipment.

While they would rather, of course, have longer time both to accumulate better material and to give new men additional training, commanders of all these units in tip-top shape, according to necessity, fight tomorrow and give a good account of themselves.

Some of the things needed to put these units in tip-top shape, according to the nation-wide survey, are:

Big scale maneuvers so the various elements can be trained in working together. These war games are expected this summer.

More powder and shells for artillery practice and quantity production of the new 105 millimeter howitzer which is to become the standard field artillery weapon and is only just beginning to show up at the posts.

Quantities of the new medium, or 25-ton tank, which will mount a 75 millimeter cannon and greatly strengthen the armored force. This tank should be rolling from the assembly lines next month.

On the other side, in addition to the divisions which are ready, these are among the stand-out accomplishments: The United States, which claims to have the best bomb sight in the world is rapidly training men in its use.

Quantities of the modern 37-millimeter anti-tank gun and of the bantam trucks which are replacing motorcycles, already are on hand.

Progress is being made in radio controlled bombs and planes.

Rapid progress has been made in aerial photography as an aid to artillery and bombardment attacks.

Field artillery units, so far with little new equipment, have greatly strengthened the effectiveness of their fire.

Daring units of the infantry of the air—paratroopers and foot soldiers to be transported in planes—have been trained.

Flying schools are turning out pilots at the rate of 12,000 a year and are ready to step up to the 30,000-a-year schedule.

In general, many new recruits, including selectees, with comparatively few weeks training have already become good, competent soldiers ready to take their places in the units.

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

SYNOPSIS

As war clouds thicken over Tientsin and other scenes of international friction in China, Howard Nevins, ostensibly an American big game hunter, reaches Honolulu. Within the hour of his arrival, he receives a mysterious phone warning, a woman's voice urging that he return to the States at once. Annoyed but undaunted, Nevins attends a dinner tendered by wealthy Abner Polk. Prominent among the guests is Baron von Rentner, a reputed German industrialist. Alluring Phedre Renoire as hostess is the subject of considerable sotto voce discussion. Polk assured Hideyo Kanamura, prosperous Japanese merchant, that "there will be no war," but others present are jittery and Coast Artillery Lieut. Wilson Clark explodes, almost assaulting Kanamura.

CHAPTER THREE

Phedre Renoire abruptly turned her beautifully coiffured head towards Nevins, and when his eyes met hers, slim white shoulders rose in a Gallic shrug.

"Voilà!" She made a pathetic little face, and her eyes, which somehow seemed older than the rest of her face, flickered to where the Japanese, coldly reserved, and the artillery officer, red and ruffled, stood glaring at each other. "That is how a war begins, no?" she queried. "Someone brings in a piece of paper with black marks on it and then—war!"

A number of not unattractive wrinkles appeared at the corners of Nevins's eyes.

"Yes, ma'moiselle, that is the worst of it. I suppose that all over the United States and Japan people will be wishing they could kill some body. We'd better break this séance up," he added. "Judging by the way our friend Clark and the Japanese gentleman are glaring at each other, Mr. Polk will have to buy a new grass rug tomorrow."

"Then in the interests of peace we are allies?" asked the French girl gravely. When Nevins nodded, her yellow-clad figure moved swiftly over to where Mr. Hideyo Kanamura was smiling mechanically with dangerous glints in his dark eyes.

"Come," she said gently, "I want you to see that famous garden of Mr. Polk's—I've always been told that the Japanese are passionately fond of flowers and gardens."

Nevins, his face an emotional blank, said in a low voice to Lieutenant Clark, "Drop it!" then in a louder tone, "I wish you'd advise me as to where I can get the best fishing. You see, I've come all the way out from the mainland to enjoy it."

Darkly the artillery officer regarded the rich Japanese ship chandler's retreating form before replying, "Oh, you'll get lots of mahimahi, swordfish, and tuna."

Nevins's skewed laugh formed an effective antidote for the recent hostility.

"Talking fish?" broke in Abner Polk. "Then Lord help you, Lieutenant. On the Malala he wouldn't talk of anything else."

"You seem to know Mr. Nevins quite well," observed Baron von Rentner heavily, and it seemed that the thought was not entirely pleasing.

Polk's head with its crest of stiff gray hair inclined carelessly.

"Oh, yes. On the Malala we had many pleasant conversations."

"About fishing, my dear Baron, about fishing. Speaking of muskies, I hear that Honolulu's got you."

you fell in love with a fair lady—a very interesting lady." Malice was in every note of the speaker's bland voice.

Nevins grinned as he realized that the steel king had adroitly put his forbidding friend on the defensive, and he was amazed to watch the appearance of a furious blush which crept into the German's harsh features and made the two faint scars along his left cheek glow with sudden color as he said:

"Really, Polk, I must beg you to leave Miss—" He checked himself just in time to clip off the girl's name; the Japanese was staring nearby.

"Hullo, Mr. Polk," found your hit at the club," he drawled. "Fancy I'm a little early—what?"

"Glad you could make it, Kil-

promptly burst into profuse apologies.

"How very careless of me! Please permit that I replace it—" Good-naturedly Polk shook his handsome gray head.

"Oh, that's all right. What is it, Felipe?"

"Misser Bruce Kilgour," announced the owlish Filipino butler just as there appeared in the doorway a man dressed in gray flannels, with a red face and hair and close-clipped mustache of sandy red.

"Hello, Mr. Polk," found your hit at the club," he drawled. "Fancy I'm a little early—what?"

"Glad you could make it, Kil-

BRISTOL BATS SILENT AS KEYSER HURLS A FOUR-HIT TRIUMPH

Newtown Defeats Bristol In First League Test By 6 to 1 Score

DAFTER TRIPLES TWICE

Bob Barouth and Army Capriotti Star for Losing Combine

By Jack Gill
Kay Kyser, who weaves a magic baton, gave way to another Keyser, a kid who pitches just as magically for Newtown High School, yesterday afternoon at Newtown. For on the hilly field just around the corner from the high school Bob Keyser held Bristol to four hits in turning in an opening day 6 to 1 league victory.

Naturally he had some help. Dafter, deft shortstop of the winners, came through with two triples that were almost identical. Both came at opportune moments when men were on base. Bristol's only four safe raps came from the bats of Bobby Barouth and Army Capriotti. Keyser had a shutout in his grasp until the sixth canto when the locals tabbed their only run.

Newtown hopped off to a two run lead in the second when Fischer reached first on an error by the right fielder. Dafter came through with a resounding three base ply that sent Fischer home. Dafter himself later scored on Frehafer's infield knock.

Last year's lower division champions added two more in the third. The millions of Coach Bill Fox found Jimmy Hopkins' offerings for three successive singles. Scott, Goodnoe and Rude were the boys who found the open spaces. Fischer popped out to Massi at second, but Dafter again caught hold of a pitch and sent it reeling past the outfield for another triple.

Two Bristol errors, a hit batsman and a single by Rude blew any Bristol chance sky high in the fifth.

It looked like a shutout going into the sixth. But Barouth doubled to left and was followed by Becardo, who popped to Goodnoe. Capriotti's clean single sent Barouth home with the homesters only tally.

Aside from Capriotti and Barouth, Keyser, who is expected to replace Driver in Newtown's annual championship drive, had little difficulty. Jimmy Hopkins was Bristol's hurler and although he was touched for nine hits, he held his own in his first start. Scott, Dafter and a rude guy named Rude did him much dirt.

FALLINGTON PROTESTS SOUTHAMPTON GAME

SOUTHAMPTON, Apr. 19—A dispute ended the Southampton-Fallington game here yesterday. The score at the time was deadlocked at 1-1 but it is being taken for granted that the umpire awarded the game to Southampton on a forfeit, Coach DeRisi, of Fallington, has entered a protest with the Lower Bucks County League's secretary.

The dispute happened at the beginning of the sixth inning. With Monti on base as the result of a pass, Shегда lined a hit over second. Coach DeRisi claimed the Southampton second baseman threw his glove at the ball, thereby entitling the batter to another base. Umpire Coulter said differently and DeRisi asked the umpire for his rule book for a ruling.

Umpire Coulter then claimed that the ball had hit the second baseman's glove, knocking it off his hand. Coach DeRisi continued to argue and was ordered off the field. He then proceeded to sit near the backstop and when Umpire Coulter noticed this, he ordered DeRisi entirely off the field to the roadside.

To prevent his players from milling about the umpire, DeRisi asked them to sit in the school bus until the matter was settled. It was then that Umpire Coulter called the game, although DeRisi did not receive any time limit to place his players back on the field or was he notified that the Southampton team was given the game on a forfeit.

On commenting on the argument last night, President of the League, George Riemer, of Bensalem, stated that as the matter now stands it is a forfeited game for Southampton and that a decision will be made on the matter within two weeks.

It was a dismal way to end what was proving to be a real ball game. Both hurlers, D. Davis and "Bill" Shегда appeared in mid-season form and had allowed three hits each. Davis was running into trouble when the tilt ended.

The boys of Claude Lodge had taken the lead in the last half of the fourth on a hit by White, a pass, and an error by Shегда. Falls tied it in the fifth on a walk to Arch, a triple by Driscoll. Driscoll was nipped on a play at the plate.

Davis was also in trouble in the first which with one out, a pair of hit batsmen and a pass loaded the sacks but he pulled through with a force-out and a strike-out.

"Despite the weight of the attack in Greece, our front nowhere has been penetrated," a British official communique said. "Heavy attacks by German armored formations and infantry along the whole front have been repulsed with severe losses to the enemy. Many prisoners have been taken."

At this crucial moment in Greece's history, King George II assumed active charge of his nation as a result of the death yesterday of Alexander Korizis, the second Greek war premier.

Bensalem Hitting Ball Hard During Fore Part of Season

By Jack Gill
Bensalem's well knit baseball team opened its official league season at Langhorne yesterday afternoon by walloping the Redskins 12 to 1. By virtue of their decisive victory the Owls remained unbeaten in local ranks. They have recorded four wins in as many starts.

According to latest statistics the Blue and Grey bat bearers must be keeping their eyes open. Their twelve runs yesterday afternoon followed a slam bang thirteen run party administered to Southampton Tuesday.

Langhorne was in the ball game for one inning. Slater opened the first a safety to left and later stole second. Wheatley sent him home with a rap past center field.

Bensalem went to work in the second and on successive hits by Strickler and Scheerer they tied the game up. They shot ahead in the third by a 3 to 1 count when Killian walked, stole second and came home on Ted Devoe's single. Devoe went to third when Cloak allowed the ball to trickle through him and he scored on a ball that went past the catcher.

The fifth was a repetition of last year's carnival on the local block. Scheerer singled to left and sped to third as the ball sizzled its way through left fielder Schardinger. Fleming bunted him home. Roberts sent a single to right and Hamor hit the air on three swipes. Jones tripled past left and Roberts ran home. Killian hit one safe and Roberts tallied. Everitt was safe on a pop to right and Killian romped home. Devoe sent one down to short that Gotwald erred on and Everitt scored the fifth and final tally. Needless to say, four more runs in the seventh merely served to prolong the contest.

Roberts hurled for Bensalem and pitched a fine eight hit ball game. Bratby went through it all for Langhorne and allowed ten bingles. Although the Langhorne pitcher whiffed seven men, he also issued out seven Annie Oakleys. Roberts fanned five.
